

GLOBAL AND INTERCULTURAL COMMUNICATION, CERTIFICATE

As issues of diversity and cross-cultural exchanges become a larger part of our personal and professional interactions, there is an increasing need to expand our knowledge and understanding of global communication practices. The Certificate in Global and Intercultural Communication will help students in all majors become ethical and inclusive communicators in the workplace and beyond.

The certificate consists of 12 credits with 6-9 credits in communication and 3-6 credits in selected courses from the fields of marketing, political science, history, cultural studies, or languages to complement students' professional aspirations or other academic interests.

The Certificate in Global and Intercultural Communication is available to students in all majors.
